

AMERICAN INDOOR AIR QUALITY COUNCIL Press Release

7 May 2008

IAQ Council Lists Qualifying Companies

The American Indoor Air Quality Council has made it easier for consumers to locate IAQ consulting and remediation companies.

A new search engine on the IAQ Council website at <http://www.iaqcouncil.org/locator/companies.htm> provides direct hyperlinks to companies that employ at least one individual with a board-awarded IAQ Council certification.

Website visitors can enter a zip code and see a list of qualifying companies located within 100 miles of the zip code entered.

“Thousands of companies already benefit from the knowledge and experience of Council-certified professionals,” said Charlie Wiles, IAQ Council executive director. “Our new search engine enhances this benefit by making their companies more visible on the internet.”

The American Indoor Air Quality Council is a non-profit certifying body founded in 1993 to serve the indoor air quality industry. The IAQ Council operates independent, third-party accredited certification programs for indoor environmental consultants, microbial consultants, microbial remediators, indoor air quality administrators and residential mold inspectors. The IAQ Council certifies more than 5,000 professionals in the United States, Canada and overseas.

For more information about the IAQ Council and its programs, please visit www.iaqcouncil.org.